

General Education Online - Status as of September 2002

The Internet (2002-09-14)

General Education developers continued their rapid rollout of new features and functionality for the GEO v2.2 website, releasing several new release candidates of 2.2 during the last several months. These releases have been made available at <http://www.findaschool.org/releases/>.

We continue to receive e-mails that point out what a wonderful job GEO is doing on the site, which help to reaffirm the decision in 2000 to continue development of the website. The developers remain committed to developing and releasing v3 as quickly and efficiently as possible. Since v3 is a ground-up rewrite of virtually all existing code, the first release is at best a few months away.

I'd like to note here that I am currently the only developer that does not have other commitments (such as v2.x maintenance), so development on v3 has been progressing far slower than I would prefer. If you would like to work alongside me on v3, please send me an e-mail at mviron@findaschool.org.

There are many new sections and functionality planned for addition this year and in the years to come, so please keep visiting the site as additional functionality and content continues to become available on the public site.

Thank you for helping make GEO the huge success that it's become.
